

Kids can be pretty mean to each other. Recognizing that most conflicts arise because of lack of knowledge about an individual or a group, this performance by Imagination Theater Chicago not only asked students to explore what respect really means, but encouraged them to be open to differences of all kinds.

The assembly, which included many student participants, taught Kendall Patriots how to handle situations that they might encounter at school or at home with their friends.

