

Safe Schools Start With Us

Why we must keep our schools safe, and what to do if you see threatening warning signs.

What to do....

Be on the lookout for any suspicious behavior both in school and online. You would rather be aware of any possible dangers, rather than regretting it later.

What to do.... See Something, Say Something

School threats can come in many ways, and there may be difficulty determining if they are real, or simply a hoax. However, no matter what, if you see the warning signs, tell a trusted adult or law enforcement immediately!

Why we should....

Better Mental Health

A focus on creating a positive and safe school environment fosters a sense of security and stability for both teachers and students. This not only can reduce anxiety and stress, but also improves social connections, and overall psychological well-being.

Why we should....

Early Intervention

Reporting school threats allows for potential dangers to be alleviated before it gets out of hand, or before anything happens in the first place. It allows for a fast and efficient response to whatever the threat may be.

Not only this, but it also grants the opportunity to provide proper support to the person who may be struggling.

Why we should.... Higher Academic Performance

If students feel unsafe in their schools, "they may be less likely to go to school at all, or less able to focus on learning while at school," according to the U.S Department of Education. Therefore, the greater the sense of safety a student feels, it is more likely they will feel well enough to perform at their best.
